

Trickling Out? A study of eco/social enterprises in Southern and Eastern Africa and their role in sustainable development and poverty alleviation

Trickle out is a research project funded by the UK Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) examining social and environmental enterprises in Eastern and Southern Africa. The project considers the role and potential contribution of such enterprises to sustainable development and poverty alleviation in 19 countries across the two regions.

The project is based in Queen's University Management School, Queen's University Belfast. To find out more about the project please visit our website <http://trickleout.net/> or email us at contactus@trickleout.net